Do you think the basic rate of Universal Credit covers these essential costs?

IT DOESN'T ADD UP.

The basic rate of Universal Credit is only £92 a week.

IT DOESN'T ADD UP.

It's simply not enough.

Universal Credit should support anyone in need of help and cover the cost of life's essentials, like food, household bills and travel.

But the shortfall between Universal Credit and living costs is forcing people to go without the essentials and pushing people to food banks.

The UK Government must make sure the basic rate of Universal Credit at least covers our core costs.

Join us, with your church, in calling on the government to guarantee our essentials.
